Seniors Offer Plan For Reading Week

Recommend an Extension of Time for Comprehensive Review in Major Subject

A meeting was held this morning by Dr. Stephen A. Freeman, representing the administration, Walter E. Boehm, '35, president of the undergraduate association, and Virginia E. Easler '35, president of the student government association, for the purpose of considering a plan for the extention of the pre-comprehensive reading period. A recommendation sponsored by the senior classes of both the men's college and the women's college, asking that three weeks be given instead of one week for reading in preparation for comprehensive examinations, was discussed by the commttee of three. No decision was reached but the recommendation will be presented to the faculty at its next meeting.

The suggestion offered by the seniors asks that final examinations in all courses not in the major department be given to seniors not later than three weeks before the comprehensives. It also asks that all theses and outside work in these courses be completed at the same time. This plan is designed to allow the seniors an opportunity to hold conferences in their major so that they may co-ordinate the various

Women To Debate Team From William and Mary

The women's debating team will meet representatives from William and Mary in Old Chapel at 8 o'clock Monday evening.

Middlebury will uphold the negative of the question: resolved, that the nations should agree to prevent the international shipment of arms and munitions. Elizabeth B. Knox '37 will be the first speaker on the home team. She will be followed by Eleanor R. Cobb '36 who will also give the rebuttal.

Judges for the contest will be Mr. Peter J. Hincks, Mr. Armory D. Seaver, and Dr. Howard I. Slocum.

The next debate, scheduled for March 9, will be with Boston university. A team composed of Miss Cobb, Barbara T. Wishart '36, and Miss Knox will make a trip to New York March 18 to debate Upsala and the College of New Rochelle. In all these contests the munitions question will be discussed.

Last week the Middlebury debaters won over a team from New York State college as supporters of the question of municipal ownership by local public utilities.

Stanley Lary To Hold Vocational Guidance Conferences With Men

Edith Muther Will Speak Here on Peace Program

Miss Edith F. Muther, noted peace advocate, will be in Middlebury Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday to give a series of lectures.

During this time, she will address fraternities and sororities, several campus organizations, and an open meeting of the liberal club which will be held on the last evening that she is here. Miss Muther is trying to organize various student groups in college to work up some stable program for peace.

Miss Muther is field secretary of the National council for prevention of war which maintains headquarters in Washington, D. C., and she represents the World Peace foundation. She was president of the International Relations club at Wellesley last year, and is being sent to the London peace conference as a representative of the youth of America in May. Miss Muther has lectured at Amherst, Dartmouth, Wesleyan, Williams, Smith and Wellesley.

The liberal club is sponsoring Miss Muther's visit and anyone interested in hearing her should communicate with Henry T. Emmons '35.

William Hunter '35 Wins Story Award

Mariette R. Bowles Named Second, Elizabeth Trask Third in Saxonian Contest

William A. Hunter '35 won the first prize of $25 in the Saxonian short story contest, for his composition "Forever Today".

The $15 second prize was awarded to Mariette R. Bowles '35 for her work entitled "—And You Will Be Happy". Elizabeth Trask '36 received $10 as third prize for the story "My Love Is Young!". Honorable mention was given to Hunter, for his contribution "There Were Other People There, I Guess"; to Miss Bowles, for "If This Be Error"; and to Miss Trask, for her composition "The Darkling Plain". Announcement of the awards was made by President Paul D. Moody in chapel Monday.

"Psyche", a writing by Otto W. Prochazka, Jr., '35, was considered by the judges as worthy of first place in the contest. However, since the judges felt that, if published, it would only meet with criticism from people who would not understand its purpose, the work was not awarded a prize.

Hunter's "Forever Today", an experimental work, is a short impres-

Group Lecture and Private Interviews Included in Two Day Visit

TALK IS SCHEDULED FOR TUESDAY NIGHT

Speaker Heads Educational Department of Boston University Club

Stanley C. Lary, director of the department of education and vocation of the University club of Boston, will be in Middlebury for a general conference and personal interviews with men of the senior class March 5 and 6.

In preparation for his visit the committee on vocations will distribute blanks tomorrow which are to be filled out by seniors wishing personal interviews. They cover interests, personal experience and available time for personal conference.

Mr. Lary will give his informal talk and general conference at 7 p. m. Tuesday, in Hepburn social hall. He will hold personal interviews by appointment all of the following day.

Mr. Lary's department at the University club operates a placement service for graduates of New England colleges, particularly those institutions which cooperate in supporting the department. He maintains wide contacts with employers of college graduates.

The speaker received his degree from Bates college in 1899 and engaged in school work in Massachusetts until 1918, when he became associated with the federal board for vocational education. He remained there for eight years and was assigned the problem of aiding men who had served in the war and who had found themselves out of adjustment vocationally on their return. As his assignment was particularly among men of college rank, he became interested in continuing his activities with men graduating from college and became associated with the Boston University club.

Men Debaters Will Encounter Rutgers

Economic Nationalism to Be Subject This Evening and At Princeton Tomorrow

A debating team representing the men's college will meet Rutgers this evening in the second of three debates on its annual New York trip. Tomorrow night they will encounter Princeton university.

Tonight Middlebury will uphold the affirmative of the question: resolved, that the nations should adopt a policy of economic nationalism, in a non-decision encounter to be held at the high school in Kearny, N. J.

The same question and side will be used tomorrow night against Princeton in a decision contest to be held in the Hamilton high school in Trenton, N. J.

Last night Middlebury met New York university upholding the affirmative of the proposition: resolved, that the manufacture of arms and munitions should be made a monopoly of the state.

Those making the trip are Charles A. Deedman '36, John F. Darrow '37, and Phillips Palmer '38. Prof. Perley C. Perkins is accompanying the team.

Plans are nearly complete for the international debate with a team representing the University of Puerto Rico which will be held March 7 in Mead chapel.

J. Middleton Murry Gives Address in Mead Chapel Monday Night On Art of Enjoying Life, Stressing Realization of One's Experience

A small but appreciative audience heard Mr. J. Middleton Murry, prominent English man-of-letters, lecture in Mead chapel Monday night. Mr. Murry's talk was on "The Art of Living Life". A splendid background of literary and critical experience supplied the speaker with the essence of his lecture.

Mr. Murry's first lecture in America was to a woman's educational group in "a town in Ohio which for the purposes of this narrative we shall call Barcelona", at which, before starting to talk, he spent an hour and a half in a well-lighted cubicle supplied with a mirror but no chair, listening to a book review of "My 42 Years in the White House" conscientiously rendered, to the treasurer's report, the minutes of the last meeting, two eulogies to deceased members (largely in verse) and three songs with an encore. During this time he was happily occupied in realizing that the women waiting without did not know who he was and were expecting to hear a racy raconteur other than himself. Though the horror of this experience was unadulterated, the recollection of it has since become a pleasure to him, indeed was partially pleasant even at the time, and he cherishes every detail of that dreadful afternoon.

This anecdote, told very wittily, served as a springboard for Mr. Murry's thesis:-that the transfusion of sorrow with joy, beauty with ugliness, the realization of the unique quality of one's own experience, make it possible for one to stand off occasionally and regard, aloofly, the sadness and absurdity of one's self engaged in the practical necessities requisite to keeping alive. This realization is, to Mr. Murry, the art of enjoying life.

We in Middlebury have a good deal in common with the woman's educational group of Barcelona, Ohio. We did not know who Mr. Murry was. At least that is the kindest explanation for the size of Monday night's audience. We hear a good deal about the lack of curiosity which characterizes our intellectual life, and it would seem that these protestations are well founded. We did not know who Mr. Murry was and what's more we did not care. It would have been worth anybody's while to find out. Before and after the war he has been a force in the literary world, a man who gave the lead to much that is valuable in current literature. He is one of the world's foremost literary critics. He has known all the great and near-great of his time. Although his critical work is more widely known than his creative work he has written some excellent books and delivered some famous lectures. Incidentally, he is a good lecturer in spite of what he referred to as his "frayed, Donnish" voice which is very low and which, combined with the British habit of half-swallowing certain words, made it sometimes difficult to hear him in competition with the low,

"PEDAGOGICAL RACKETEERING"

The March issue of Scribner's magazine carries an interesting and stimulating article called "Pedagogical Racketeering" by Dean Henry W. Holmes of the Harvard school of education. We feel that the people of Middlebury College, because of the unusual interest given here to the teaching profession, should have their attention directed to it. The article covers several vital points in this business of education, and it raises other considerations that are still more important.

Dean Holmes, while criticising the schools of education for continuing their existence chiefly because they are profitable, suggests not that they be eliminated, but that they adopt a new and larger philosophy in the training of teachers so that they may produce educators and not merely pedagogs.

In developing his thesis, Dean Holmes exhibits a broad and enlightened concept of education, and all that he says is quite true. He submits that the end of education is "a mastery of life and its conditions in which all men may have due share, not in the labor only, but in the vision and the worth and the reward", and also "the forwarding of the Great Society". This is indeed a splendid ideal, and Dean Holmes offers the hope that perhaps our economic depression will give birth to a fuller understanding of education in terms of society and bring about the realization of his ideal. In presenting the means of attaining a standard of education capable of bringing about his ideal end, he deals only with the training of teachers, however. He offers several general aims in the training of teachers as the means to his end. As far as he goes he is right. But he does not go deep enough into the practical problem of education.

He outlines the following requirements for the training of educators as a means to an enlightened education:

First, that potential teachers have "the foundation of a broad and extended education"; second, that they should carry the study of their particular subject "to the stage of an independent and scholarly approach"; third, that they should study education "deeply enough and long enough to achieve some real understanding of its major social, psychological, and economic problems"; fourth, that they should "bring to bear on the specific work they are to do" insights that should "of course have general value"; fifth, that they should "be approved for their general promise".

All of these generalities are true, sound, and desirable, and if accomplished, would produce super-teachers that would truly be educators in the finest sense of the word. To attain the ideal end of education that he offers, this training of teachers would be entirely necessesary. But Dean Holmes ignores the fact that no matter how magnificent our teachers may be, we can never attain the realization of his ideal education without first eliminating the practical evils of our educational system.

The obstacle that lies in the way of attaining an exalted education that would realize his ideal is the fact that educators do not really control our education. High schools are controlled through politics, and certain meddling interests supervise what is taught and how it is taught; no matter how well trained the teacher, he must abide by the wishes of those who have the power to have his job taken from him. State universities are also hampered by politics. And the private institutions are, after all, indirectly controlled by those who have the power of dollars and cents, and not by those with a knowledge of education.

No, merely training super-teachers is not enough. If we can reach the point where high school teachers have the freedom to teach civics by telling the pupil what happened to the money collected by taxes for the mending of roads that were never fixed, instead of merely teaching him about the legal structure of municipal government, then we will be on the right path. And when we reach the point where the college professor can teach the fundamental truths of economics without bringing down upon himself the wrath of someone who happens to have a large interest in utilities as well as an interest in the college, then we will be on the right path. Not before then. Yes, Dean Holmes, the pedagog should be an educator. But he must be a free educator.

Poking About

—by Isabel H. Davies '36

DAVID: "It's quite all right for you to stand there on my desk—you with your memories of the Burlington curiosity shop, but that isn't taking up the cudgels in our defense. If you have any sort of apparatus behind those squinty eyes, set it going and tell me what to do."

PETER: "I should know. It's your affair. You got me into this mess. So I'm the symbol of all that is beautiful and natural in pigs. A 'Memorial to innocence' huh? Well, isn't that nice. Gaddering swine, man, do you suppose everybody overlooked the fact that I was a satire on one professor's pet theories of Art? And because people didn't get the point, they stick me in the neck! Acorns ! !"

DAVID: "That was funny, wasn't it, using his old definition and all, and still being misunderstood."

PETER: "Maybe you are amused, but I'm not. Why should I lay myself open to ridicule and abuse and everything?"

DAVID: "You know I'm desperately sorry about it all, because when I wrote it, I hadn't any idea that it would cause you so much trouble."

PETER: "Trouble, man! It's been anguish. After all, I've got feeling just as keen as yours. In a smaller way of course. But I don't think my nervous system is developed up to the point of bearing this continued strain. I'm losing weight. Oh dear, why did you have to tell them what color I was, and whether or not my tail is curly? I'll have it permanently straightened, like a poker, pretty soon."

DAVID: "Don't get so excited, Peter. How could I write about you without describing you just a little ?And even if the editorial writer was annoyed by your color, "Doc" said it was all right to have pink pigs as long as there were black ones to provide contrast. It's like the backgrounds he talks about. If you have a scarlet one and you put a scarlet A against it, it doesn't show, but if you have a black background with a scarlet A on it, people will talk. The Board hasn't found any black pigs to balance it."

PETER: "I don't understand all that scarlet letter business and I'm not in the least flattered by being used as a hideous example of something or other."

DAVID: "Well, of course, you get the knocks, but it all reflects back on me. Aren't you just a tiny bit proud of the fact that you've caused the college some food for thought?"

PETER: "As a change from pork 'n applesauce 'n corn dinners, maybe? Perhaps. But honestly, can you see any reason for a Victorian professor's dragging me in to "Mary's Neck" by the skin of my snout?"

DAVID: "You don't believe he was roasting you! Why, all he said was that if pink pigs represented your standard of art, let them, and enjoy whatever is beautful about them."

PETER: "That lets you out. But it sounds like a 'swill trough philosophy' to me, like what Carlyle said."

DAVID: "Now you're being silly, and mixing philosophy and economics and hurt pride. Besides, must you see such expressions? Get your mind above your stomach."

PETER: "I told you I was quoting Carlyle. But I'll go right on saying things like that. It's virile and realistic and experimental. I'll say what I please. Anything to spoil that illusion you had about whether or not I have wings. Who ever heard of pigs having such useless things, anyhow?"

DAVID: "I was only quoting Lewis Carroll."

PETER: "I know, I know. I can smell out quotations like truffles. But we mustn't be trivial and ephemeral in our attack on all those litters of people who laughed at us."

DAVID: "You might make a public announcement, say from the balcony of Old Chapel stairs, inviting contributions, criticism, and comment. You'd look so resolute and self-confident, like Washington taking the oath of office er something. That would give those men something to think about while they stand around smoking. What do you think about trying?"

PETER: "I could climb those old steps. Little Golly Moody does it every morning. Maybe I could practice home from the libe some night. Then do you suppose people would like me for what I am? Honestly, I'm a pretty good pig."

DAVID: "Of course you could. Sure, you're a swell pig. Didn't I say you were a master-piece?"

Here and There

by C. and D.

We have come to the conclusion that somebody must read our column. Every week now one kind critic tells us that it is worse than it was last week, and another person tells us that we are getting away with much more murder than we did the week before. All we need now is one loyal little stooge that will tell us every week that he or she read the column, read it all, and even liked some of it. To that kind soul we will give a short prize consisting of one copy-book maxim that we read somewhere that states, "the only thing at which perfect success can be achieved without hard work is making a fool of yourself." This will be inlaid in olive pits on the ventral surface of a side hill gouger.

The last gym dance seemed to be a success from the minute they turned on that subtle red flood lamp. If this kind of thing keeps up everyone will begin to realize what makes the wildcats wild. One lucky girl had the good fortune of attending the dance with one of our leading gamblers when he was hot. He could have pulled the deuce of clubs out of any pack. We who are not so fortunate realize that the lighters cost only a quarter and the candy was good stuff for thirty-five cents a pound, but if you want to pretend that it cost two to four times as much it will be oke with us. We certainly cheered for everybody except the winners in the prize waltz, even though they were by far the best. We feel that somebody has to encourage the lesser artists that only lack experience.

What leading basketball player found a package of Kleenex in his seat in chapel with this card attached—from the committee on the preservation of the sanitation of the Gym floor?

After a personal interview with no less than five leading two-timers we have come to the conclusion that it all is most easily summed up in these famous words. "My conscience hath a thousand several tongues, and every tongue brings in a several tale, and every tale condemns me for a villian". ——Ibid (Richard III). We wish somebody would shoot this bird, Ibid, for saying such an awful thing.

If Bernard Shaw had been down to the Playhouse when the class in play production was trying to learn how to read a part, he would have gone completely whacky when one of our leading athletes and frog-furriers wailed fervently to a lady of that ilk, "Can-dida, Can-dida, Can-dida". Which all goes to prove that the proof of the pudding is in the making, and not in the eating, as was formerly erroneously thought. That last is rapidly taking the place of the obselete maxim—The sweetest meat is nearest the bone.

We saw a picture of two babes in the last issue—They got to the bottom of the hill without a spill. Somehow or other we are impelled to wonder.

Mastery of Self and Need of Religion Are Stressed as Great Problems of Today

Dr. Thomas S. Mutch, speaking at the vespers service Sunday evening, used as his theme the question, "Of What Use Is Religion?"

Dr. Mutch said that he felt that this was a valiant question and was deserving of a thoughtful answer. "The answer," he said, "was to be his sermon." Comparing the unrest of modern times to that of England in the time of King Charles, he said that he supposed the past as well as the present asked many questions as to the meaning, dignity, and purpose of religion.

"Religion," he said, "is related to three areas in the experience of life. Most of us think of life as good and kindly, but then there comes a time when we realize that it is sometimes threatening, bringing illness, accident, and death to our loved ones. But we must learn to master physical forces and succumb to them to a certain extent." Dr. Mutch quoted the phrase "Transform and transcend the world", which he considered an apt expression of the purpose of religion.

The speaker in referring to the book, "Red Rust", showed how some people acquiesce to unwholesome conditions that appear to them to be the will of God. He said, however, that he thought that one character who, by his inquisitive, unaccepting attitude solved the problem of the blight on the wheat, had the more worthwhile spirit.

Dr. Mutch said that to stir the hearts of men and women, creating a divine discontent would bring about a better day. He related how the Kingdom of God may be established here on earth by the power of Jesus.

The speaker pointed out to us that we never really attain a complete mastery of life, for there are times when we need faith in God for resources of strength and stability. "The religion of Jesus," said Dr. Mutch, "supplies us with interpretation and spiritual guidance so that we need not be overwhelmed by life."

The second area in which religion is applied, according to the speaker, is in our relationships with our fellow men who must always play a dual role. He showed how society on the one hand holds us up to a standard of decency and on the other, social pressure holds us down to a certain group conformity. The speaker said that there are those who do not hold to the freedom of what everybody else is doing and refuse to be enslaved to new standards. There are always those who are lonely and especially this type of rugged individualist who, according to Dr. Mutch, will always be assured of the companionship and copartnership of God. He quoted from Lord Shaftesbury, "I must persevere and by God's help, so I will."

The final point that the speaker made was the necessity of religion in the integration of our characters. He said that our greatest problem was the problem of ourselves, the mastery of self. Dr. Mutch said, "We need people to propound the secret of creative, courageous, abundant life, which is the purpose of the high ideals and teachings of Christ."

Twenty-Five German Club Members Attend Sleigh Ride Thursday Evening

The German club conducted a sleigh ride for twenty-five members Thursday evening. After the ride refreshments were served in Pearsons social hall and German songs were sung. Louise G. Fleig, president, was in charge of arrangements.

Regular meetings of the little club will be discontinued until after the spring recess since several members of this group are preparing three short plays by Hans Sachs to be given at a general meeting just before vacation. Prof. Werner Neuse is directing these plays.

COMMUNICATION

To the Editor of the CAMPUS:

Jean C. Wiley '35 gave a very enjoyable recital of classic and modern music in the Chateau Sunday afternoon.

She played the lovely Sonata Opus 26, of Beethoven with feeling, and succeeded in bringing out its beautiful tonal qualities. Her performance of Chopin's Ballade in A flat showed thorough technique and a mastery of difficult music. The modern pieces were interpreted with skill, a sense of humor, and an understanding of their essential modernism. She played the entire program from memory, a really remarkable accomplishment in view of the nature of the program; and further proof of her unusual talent as a musician. Miss Wiley is a striking example of the fact that it is possible for a student to continue practical work in music to an advanced stage in college, even teaching several pupils of her own, and at the same time maintain a high scholastic average in her other academic subjects.

Miss Wiley was accompanied in the program by Virginia W. Pearce, a graduate student in French, who sang a group of songs. Miss Pearce has a melodious voice: she sings intelligently and with restraint. Her selections were a most agreeable addition to the concert by Miss Wiley. In addition to the concert Louise E. Hubbard '36 supplied very acceptable accompaniment.

Professor Schmidt Gives Reading Friday Afternoon

Prof. Bruno M. Schmidt read selections from "Why Be an Evolutionist?" by Prof. Herdman F. Cleland Friday afternoon in the Abernethy wing of the library.

The readings included some of the story of man's evolution based on the facts which archeologists and geologists have found buried in caves and sediments. They also pointed out that individual improvement depends on future improvement of our social organization.

Professor Cleland was head of the geology and minerology department at Williams until the Mohawk disaster off the Coast of New Jersey brought his career to a close.

This was the last in the series of Abernethy readings for the year.

German Music To Be Sung By Merx

International Artist to Give Selections of Folk Lyrics In Pearsons Hall March 8

Hans Merx, interpreter of German "Lieder" at American and European universities, will offer a recital in Pearsons social hall March 8. This program is being brought to Middlebury through the combined efforts of the music and German departments and the German and A Tempo clubs.

Each selection on the program will be interpreted and explained in English by Mr. Merx before he sings it. The texts of the songs are taken largely from poems by Goethe, Heine, Moerike, and Scheffel.

Mr. Merx has given recitals at the University of Bonn in Germany, at the University of Toronto in Canada, and in this country, at Mount Holyoke, Hunter, New York university and Boston university. He will present a program at Dartmouth just before his visit to Middlebury. During the summer months he sings over the West German radio network.

There will be no admission fee for members of the German and A Tempo clubs. A charge of twenty-five cents will be made for others who wish to attend the recital.

Third Annual Ladies-in-Waiting Ball To Be Held in Masonic Hall March 16

The third annual ladies-in-waiting ball will be held March 16 in the Masonic hall with the Black Panthers providing the music.

This is one of the most exclusive formals of the year as only those who have at some time waited on table in one of the college dining rooms and their invited guests may attend.

Dorothy Gray '35 is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements for the dance. She will be assisted by Doris G. Anderson '35, Jessie M. Gibson '35, Miriam E. Smith '35, and Isabel A. Ingham '37.

Panther Hoopsters Win Two Contests

Blue and White Team Wins From Norwich 34-15, from U. S. Coast Guard 54-29

Midd 34—Norwich 15

Returning to their winning stride again, the Panther quintet romped to a 34-15 victory over an obviously weak Norwich university five Wednesday evening to gain a decisive lead in the race for the Green Mountain Conference title.

Although the score would indicate that the Blue and White were a much superior team, the Panthers played sloppy ball, and it was only due to the inability of the Cadets to show anything of a shooting eye that brought success to the Middmen. The Cadet offensive was a pitiable sight; not once did they score on anything that resembled a prearranged play, but all their counters came as the result of long hit or miss pop shots.

The Panther five was leading at the half by a 20-4 margin mainly through the efforts of captain Clonan who collected eight of the twenty counters, while the only Cadet bids came when Hatfield made a nice solo dash, and Comi sunk a pop shot from mid-floor.

The second half saw Norwich desperately trying to make those long shots click and succeeding in collecting eleven points only to be matched shot for shot as Hoehn found his usual shooting eye to net two beautiful hoop shots in a row, following with a long looper from mid-court, and climaxed by tapping in a rebound after a mix up under the basket. F. Clonan, Benson, and Lins with one apeice, brought the Middlebury total to 34, while Hatfield, Laikus, Williams, and Diego each collected for the Cadets in addition to three free shots.

Had the Horsemen capitalized on their many free throws or had any luck with their many attempted long loopers, the final score would have been different. Frequent substitutions perhaps can be used as an alibi for the rather disorganized performance of the Panther forces.

Midd 54—Coast Guard 29

Middlebury showed a marked improvement over its play of two nights before when it swamped the U. S. Coast Guard academy by a 54-29 score on the McCullough court Friday.

The Panther unleashed its greatest scoring barrage of the season and after the first twelve minutes of play had the Guardsmen very definitely "hanging on the ropes." The Midd machine experienced a bit of trouble getting started, however, as eight minutes had elapsed before Hoehn tallied the first Middlebury basket from the floor. At this time the count read 10-8 for the opposition, but Leete tied things up and Captain Clonan started the parade with a step shot on a pass from Leete. Waldron and Cass counted for the New Londoners both on long set shots that swished unmolested through the twine, but Hoehn came back for Middlebury with eight points in half as many minutes. Everybody in the game at the time scored at least one for Middlebury and the score stood 34-16 at the half.

The second stanza saw the Blue and White lose no time in getting under way again, with Captain Clonan and Lins both hooking them from in close. Waldron got two long set shots, however, and with ten minutes to play Weller netted a long shot to make the score read 38-24. Leete counted twice for Midd, and Captain Clonan spun for one more before Weller could get set for the next Coast Guard tally. Lins then got 4 points as did Anderson, who was in for Clonan, to end the Panther scoring for the evening. Bokamas of the visitors tallied the last 3 points of the game on a foul and a hook shot from right under the net.

Middlebury's defence worked well throughout the whole contest, the Guardsmen being forced to content themselves with long shots. Waldron, however, had an eye for the long heaves and led the visitor's scoring with 11 points. Hoehn was high man for Middlebury getting 13 points, all in the first half, with his running mate, Leete, playing a nice floor game and falling just 2 points behind his partner in the final reckoning. Captain Clonan easily outplayed his opponent at center, and Lins on the Panther backline sank 4 baskets and a like number of fouls to be second high with 12 points.

FLASHES

by "Stooge"

In spite of the fact that a glance at the record of the hockey team shows only three wins as against five defeats, too much can not be said for the boys and their coach. Clearly outskated in practically every contest it was only a spirit of team play and a first rate knowledge of good sound hockey and how it should be played that kept them always a threat until the final whistle.

While we seem to be donating useless dust collectors to people who really deserve much better, how about a little recognition to: . . . . . that Panther basketball forward who has played such a grand floor game all season but has had such a tough time making his shots do anything else but roll off the rim . . . . . also that "P-four" guard who has experienced his share of one season's difficulty in breaking into the tally column. Box scores, you know, are nasty things. They just don't tell the whole story, but then we suppose this game must have its unsung heroes too . . . . . those "giggling gals" from the wind blown dorm seem to get so much more fun out of watching basketball games than anyone else. More power to them for getting loads more enjoyment out of it all than the bored spectator who thinks he really knows something about the finer points of the game . . . . . basketball timer who can put real pathos (or is it romance?) into horn blowing . . . . er, oh lets stop all this.

Pucksters Lose To Williams Team 6-1

Poor Ice Conditions Hinder Action of Both Sextets as Panthers Finish Season

In the concluding encounter of the season the Blue and White puckmen were defeated by a powerful Williams sextet 6-1 on the Williamstown rink Wednesday.

Attempting to avenge the 8-5 defeat handed them by the Purple in an earlier contest, the Panthers were speedy and elusive on the ice but lacked the abundant reserve power of the Williams squad. The lopsided final score is no indication of the course of the battle. With both teams handicapped by poor ice conditions, the play was evenly balanced but not spectacular. Vain attempts to score were waged by Coach Nelson's men but, with plenty of spares to draw from, the Purple aggregation checked the swift Panther advances.

Middlebury outplayed the opposition during the first period. The clash opened with a rapid rush by Phinney through the entire Williams formation and a try for the net which was stopped by the Purple goalie. The Massachusetts team recorded one point during the period, but most of the action centered around their own end of the ice. Soon after the opening of the second stanza, with only three men on the ice, the Panthers' chances in both offensive and defensive play grew slim. Led by Mosely the Williams squad played five men up and tallied four points in rapid succession. Near the close of the period Westin scored in a medley near the goal, netting the Blue and White its only count. In the closing session the Middmen waged a battle almost as fierce but not quite as effective as their first period attack. Although the play revolved around the Williams defensive zone practically the entire period, Mosely starred again for the opposition when a direct shot from in front of the net found its mark.

Coach Nelson experimented with his lines throughout most of the contest using D. Swett the most promising of the freshmen candidates for the first time this year.

The lineup:

Middlebury (1)		Williams (6)
Nash	g	Spragen
MacLean	rd	Mosely
Bakey	ld	Perkins
Phinney	c	Sherman
Dawes	rw	Jones
Brooks	lw	Egbert

Spares: Middlebury—Groby, Westin, Moore, M. Swett; Williams—Jackson, Griffin, Willis, Noble, Perry, Nields, Mosher, Dunn.

Goals: Mosely (3), Sherman (2), Jones; Westin.

Indoor Mile Relay Team To Compete at Montreal

Middlebury's indoor mile relay team, which has competed creditably in New York and Boston meets this winter, will close its campaign Saturday March 8 at Montreal when it competes in the Canadian indoor championships.

Because of its success against the Montreal A. A. A. in recent years, the Panther team has been invited to run in the Dominion title meet which is being sponsored by the Amateur Track and Field association of the Province of Quebec. Boehm, Forbush, MacFadyen, and Hoxie, who make up the Blue and White one-mile quartet, will race against competitors as yet unnamed in the relay event. Captain Mathewson, college record-holder in both the high and low hurdles, will compete for the timber-topping championship of the Dominion.

Coach Brown will concentrate upon winning the relay, but if the individual championship events should follow the relay race, the men may try their hand at the individual competition. Hoxie and Boehm have been entered in the sprints, and MacFadyen will run the 1,000 yard race. Forbush has been entered in the 600 and the 1,000.

The University of Vermont will also be represented in the meet.

INTRAMURAL SPORTS

In the intramural winter sports tournament which was completed Thursday afternoon, Sigma Phi Epsilon emerged victorious due to a marked superiority in skiing and snowshoeing events.

The Sig Ep winter sportsmen, whose thirty-two points were amassed by the scoring of four first, three second, and three third places in seven of the ten tournament contests, were trailed by Delta Kappa Epsilon which gained sixteen of its eighteen points by sweeping the three skating events. Chi Psi was enabled to gain third ranking because of a first in the ski cross-country and seconds in the ski dash and ski jumping. Alpha Sigma Phi, which was credited with firsts in the ski dash and a third in the slalom, was close behind with 10 points. Delta Upsilon and Kappa Delta Rho were tied for fifth position with nine points each. Beta Kappa and the Neutrals, with one and no points respectively, brought up the rear.

Under the scoring system which is used in the general tournament for the "trophy of trophies", SPE gained 120 points from her winter sports participation. DKE was awarded 6 points. CP received forty points, as did KDR. ASP added 20 points to her total.

Other teams gained no award from this phase of the general tournament. Forty entry points were given for having a team in at least two snowshoe and two skiing events.

The tournament began on January 18 when the ski and snowshoe cross-country runs were held. Five important events were held at Chipman hill on February 15 as part of the winter carnival. The three skating contests were run off last Thursday.

Campus Decathlon Will Begin Friday

Competition Will Be Open to All Members of College in Program of Eight Events

The annual all-campus board track decathlon competition for this year will begin Friday afternoon, March 1. This event, which includes a 60 yard dash, 60 yard low hurdles, 880 yard run, one mile run, high jump, pole vault, discus throw, and shot put, is open to all members of the college. Gold medals will be awarded to the winners of each event, and silver loving-cups will go to the three highest scorers.

Coach Brown has sponsored this event each year to maintain interest in track and field and to provide competition and training for track men. New material is consistently asked to appear in the decathlon.

Last year William A. Hunter '35 was winner of first place, and Otto W. Prochazka '35, and Elwood A. Hoxie '36 were tied for second. This year both Hunter and Prochazka will not be competing in the event because of injuries, and Hoxie is favored to capture the first place cup. Strong opposition to Hoxie will probably come from MacFadyen, Forbush, LaBouchere, Boehm, and Williams, as well as from potentially strong but still untried freshmen.

Competition in the decathlon events will cover approximately a week, weather permitting. The schedule will be arranged so that the relay men who are to run at Montreal will be able to maintain reasonable training. The first event to be run off will be the 60 yard dash, which will be contested in trial heats. The hurdles will also be run in trials.

Quintet To Engage Catamount Tonight

Victory in Burlington Clash Will Clinch the State Title For Blue and White Five

Leading the race for the Green Mountain Conference basketball championship, Middlebury will try to clinch matters tonight when it meets the University of Vermont on the Catamount court in the final game of the season.

Having decisively defeated Norwich and St. Michael's twice each, as well as Vermont once, in conference competition, the Panther stands as the logical favorite for tonight's tilt and the championship that goes with it. When Vermont appeared here two weeks ago, Middlebury experienced little trouble in turning back the Catamount attack, 40-20. At that time the Green and Gold showed little else than the proper spirit and fell a sorry victim. Captain "Whitey" Palmer at a guard post was the only Vermont man to score more than one basket from the floor, and was the only redeeming feature in the visitors' attack. Never reputed to be much of an offensive team the Green and Gold hardly proved itself overrated. This time, however, it will have the advantage of playing on its home court and may be a bit more successful in stemming the Blue and White tide.

Coach Sabo will probably use approximately the same lineup that appeared in the game here. Steirn and Young are expected to hold down the forward berths with Duncan at center and Palmer and Warden at the guard posts. Tomnetti, Gerow, Shaw and Parker will be in reserve. For Middlebury, Hoehn and Leete seem the logical selections for the forward positions, with Captain Clonan at center and the guard posts being filled by Martin, Lins or F. Clonan. Pollard, Benson, Anderson, Zawistoski and Lonergan may also see service as reserves.

Panther Skimen to Enter Canadian Meet This Week

For the first time in the history of winter sports at Middlebury, the college ski team will be represented in Canada. Four members of the varsity team, Springstead, Meacham, Holmes, and Hubbard, left this afternoon for St. Sauveur to compete in the Intercollegiate Ski Union meet to be held forty-five miles north of Montreal Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

In entering this Canadian tourney, Middlebury will encounter the leading skiers in Canada, in addition to the skilled winter sportsmen whom they have already encountered in various meets in the United States. The scoring system will be that which was used at the Dartmouth meet, the new ISU method, points to be given in slalom, downhill, jumping, cross-country, relay, and a combined event.

NEW PLAN OFFERED FOR READING WEEK

courses taken in the major department.

Professor Freeman pointed out to the student representatives the practical difficulties of the plan. It would put too great a load on the already fully-occupied faculty, who would still have their regular classes to meet, despite the withdrawal of senior members. He also stated that the general sentiment among the faculty favors either complete abolition of the reading period or else extension to four weeks. Faculty opinion as a whole favors some definite system for supervision of senior study during a lengthened reading week.

Meetings of both the men's and the women's senior classes will be held as soon as possible to consider the matter from the new angles presented.

If you want to pass your final examinations these days, you don't study, you just have a good time and relax your mind—that is, if you take the advice that editors of college newspapers are passing out to their readers.

The composition "—And You Will Be Happy", by Miss Bowles, concerns a young couple who, at the risk of their happiness, are forced by public opinion to conform to the rules of convention. The judges for this contest were Prof. William S. Burrage, Prof. Juan A. Centeno, and Miss Charlotte Moody.

The prize-winning stories will be featured in the next issue of the Saxonian, which will come out the second week in March.

The selection, buying and preparation of the right kinds of Turkish tobaccos for making Chesterfield Cigarettes is a business in itself . . .

Handling Turkish tobacco in the Liggett & Myers modern factory at Smyrna, Turkey.

WE have buyers in all the tobacco markets of Turkey and Greece, including Xanthi, Cavalla, Smyrna and Samsoun.

And at Smyrna Chesterfield has built the most modern tobacco plant in the Near East.

Here the spicy, aromatic Turkish leaf is sorted and graded under the eyes of our own tobacco men.

Then it is put away to age in its own climate for two years or more to make it milder and better-tasting.

When you blend and cross-blend the right kinds of aromatic Turkish tobacco with mild ripe home-grown tobaccos as we do in Chesterfield you have . . .

the cigarette that's milder
the cigarette that tastes better
